Criminal Protection Response

- What would you do if your company received a threat to kill or harm one of your employees, or damage your property?
- One of your employees disappears while travelling on business, how would you respond?
- What if your premises were involved in a hostage incident and your employees were held against their will?

According to the Health and Safety Executive there were an estimated 373,000 threats to employees in England and Wales in 2012/2013¹

Most UK and Irish companies would simply answer these questions by saying “We would call the police”. Of course, this is generally accepted to be the correct procedure. However if the incident happened outside the UK and Ireland, the local law enforcement in the country concerned may not respond in the way you would wish or within the desired time frame.

Travelers Criminal Protection Response (CPR) cover allows the insured to engage with expert threat and hostage response consultants which enhances any support that law enforcement may offer.

Many small to medium size companies do not have the in-house capability to handle the type of incidents covered under the Travelers CPR cover. Purchasing cover provides access to Travelers exclusively retained security consultancy, Constellis, removing the need to source and hire expensive specialist consultants if the worst were to happen.

If any of the above events should occur, Constellis is available to respond 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Their consultants can give immediate advice and support by telephone and if necessary, deploy a consultant to either the insured’s head office or to the location of the incident.

Travelers CPR covers all directors, officers and employees for all insured events. In addition, immediate family members of directors and officers are covered for disappearance, express kidnap and threat response.

Stand-alone Kidnap and Ransom coverage

In addition to CPR cover, Travelers also offers stand-alone Kidnap and Ransom coverage. Clients who purchase the standalone coverage are able to access much broader cover, including additional insured events such as kidnap, illegal detention and extortion. Our stand-alone Kidnap and Ransom policies can also include everything covered by CPR at higher limits and for additional territories. For further details visit www.travelers.co.uk/kandr

Criminal Protection Response - claims examples

Disappearance

An employee travelling in Europe leaves to go jogging one morning and does not return to his hotel. There is no contact from the employee. The local police and hospitals are contacted but he cannot be traced.

Expenses covered may include:

Response Consultant's fees and expenses in investigating the disappearance
(Please note a time limit of 30 days and a waiting period of 48 hours applies)

Express Kidnap

An employee is stopped in the street late at night by two men who threaten him at gunpoint and force him into a waiting vehicle. He is then taken to a cashpoint and forced to withdraw money. They hold him for a couple of hours (into the next day) when they drive him to another cashpoint where he is forced to withdraw additional money.

Expenses covered may include:

Response Consultant's fees and expenses
Reimbursement of ransom

Threat (without a ransom demand)

The Personal Assistant to the Managing Director (MD) of a company receives an anonymous telephone call threatening to harm him and his family. There is no ransom demand and the call only lasts for a few seconds. Two days later, photographs of the MD's wife and children on their way to school are sent to the office and there are several suspicious attempts to access the MD's home.

Expenses covered may include:

Response Consultant's fees and expenses (assessment and investigation of the threat)
Temporary security costs to protect the MD and their immediate family and the property being threatened

Hostage Crisis

A group supporting a terrorist organisation, breaks into the Insured's premises and holds employees hostage stating they wish certain governments to release prisoners.

A number of employees of an office based consultancy who act for a global pharmaceutical company are held hostage in their building by activists who then make contact with the senior management of the firm via social media. The demand is that the senior partner of the firm appears on national television denouncing the testing of animals and saying that the firm will no longer act for the pharmaceutical company. The incident lasts for 9 hours.

Expenses covered may include:

Response Consultant's fees and expenses
